On the Mall, art turned inside out

MATT MCCLAIN FOR THE WASHINGTON POST

At the Smithsonian's Hirshhorn Museum on Tuesday night, passersby could see a preview of Doug Aitken's "Song 1," an artwork he hopes will "fuse with the city around it." The 360-degree projection blends film of drivers on a nighttime freeway with the pop classic "I Only Have Eyes for You." It can be seen from sunset to midnight, Thursday through May 13. ► For a multimedia presentation on the work, visit wapo.st/hirshhorn.
